Popular Festivals Hopping alongside Tame Impala is equally likely to lead to a case of insomnia or a frightening guitar solo. What this trio are best at is finding delight in the juxtaposition of contrasting musical styles. From the sparse, drifting melodies of their cut up indie pop to the slashing riffs of their guitar solos, everything in Elephant is perfectly weighted. Kicking off their world tour is their latest mixtape, Exit. Visible on its cover, Exit is a nocturnal landscape that travels through a waning light. Elephant are behind the telescope lens of the cover and the hand-written notes in the foreground take them on a night-time, poetic odyssey. The tranquil mood is contrasted to the jagged edge of some of the music, and the sombre mood is only further heightened by the footage of Tame Impala's recent film The Slow Rush. Less a mixtape and more a late night art project, the tape is a free download, available on their MySpace and Bandcamp pages. It's available to download in two forms: one is a mix of any song you like, the other lets you choose your favourites. Exit can be heard in its full glory through the MySpace page for the band. The site offers a 'visualiser' which pans across the individual songs, and a 'mix player' in which you can skip around the selection. The player is very simple, but still manages to provide a suitably hypnotic experience. 'Scene One' is a short, acoustic solo which pokes fun at the close-mic problem endemic to folk singers. 'Walkman Killers' is a reworked version of the song from Elephant's second album The Centre Cannot Hold. 'Lights' is only available on the album version, but it serves well as a sample for an otherwise over-produced track. Surprisingly, the most interesting track comes in the form of 'Obstacle 3', which has been covered by U.S. indie band The Manhattan Project. 'Caller 2' is a spoken word piece that brings together Elephant's interest in post-punk and ambient rock. Yet despite the density of material, there's also space for a few tracks from Elephant's back catalogue. 'Cold Blonds' is the cover of a song

What's New in the?

This invention relates to an arithmetic data processor which is widely used to process images and sound and a data processing system constituted by employing such an arithmetic data processor. In a conventional arithmetic data processor, since a cache memory is generally used in order to increase an access speed, a boundary area between a main memory space and a cache memory space is defined as a fixed area to be moved during a process, as is described in "Kawarabu" Vol.32, No.9, pp.34-41. However, since a boundary area between a main memory space and a cache memory space is generally fixed irrespective of the state of use of a cache memory and a main memory, when a process to be executed can be executed at least on a main memory, the following problem is posed: In such a conventional arithmetic data processor, when an arithmetic data processing is executed in the course of the execution of an instruction in a cache memory, since the execution of the arithmetic data processing is stopped, there is a problem that the access rate decreases and the execution of the arithmetic data processing cannot be executed. In order to solve such a problem, the following methods have conventionally been used: (1) A cache controller is provided and a region to be moved is selected in consideration of the execution of an arithmetic data processing in a cache memory, as described in JP-A-62-33056, JP-A-63-236658, JP-A-61-255557 and JP-A-64-12285. PA0 (2) When an arithmetic data processing is to be executed in a cache memory, an instruction to be executed is temporarily moved from a cache memory into a main memory, then the data to be processed is moved from the main memory into a cache memory in accordance with the instruction, and the processing is resumed in the cache memory as described in JP-A-62-87109. PA0 (3) A data processing to be executed is divided into a group of data to be processed in a cache memory and another group of data to be processed in a main memory and the processing is executed in a suitable manner so as to avoid decrease of the access rate when an arithmetic data processing is to be executed in a cache memory as described in JP-A-63-17640. In the method (1) described above, a cache controller is provided for each of upper-level hierarchical cache memories and a region to be moved is selected in consideration of the execution of
